2. A draft cover memorandum was reviewed which appears to be generally satisfactory but will remain in draft form until the Memorandum of Understanding is completed.

3. A persistent area of concern exists regarding identification of counterparts in ORD and TSD to resolve the variety of problems which may be expected. The variable nature of these problems and the different organizational level in which these problems may exist appears to preclude any simple counterpart identification. The normal practice of referring unresolved problems to the next level of supervision should suffice.
